"When you lose someone or something precious—like when I lost use of my hands and legs in an accident—grief can become suffocating. You long for a friend to help connect God's Word with your overwhelming feelings of loss. Bob Kelleman is that friend, skillfully helping the reader rise above their anguish in his remarkable new book, Grief: Walking with Jesus. As one who understands loss, I highly recommend it!"

"I love this devotional! Grief: Walking with Jesus brings such hope to the grieving person through the Word of God in each entry! The Scriptures remind the reader that God welcomes our lamentations and enters into our grief. Bob gently and purposefully bring us from the casket of loss back to the abundant life we have in Christ, all the while capturing the emotions of loss and grief powerfully. I have found Grief: Walking with Jesus to be balm to my soul as I grieve the loss of my father. Bob's compassion and God's love are clear in every entry, and it is with gratitude that I endorse Grief, Walking with Jesus. I believe it will bring healing to many aching hearts."

"People in the throes of grief need truth. But they don't need it dumped on them or force fed into their beleaguered lives. They need truth offered in ways they can reach and touch into the darkness. Truth that introduces them in fresh and intimate ways to the Savior who draws close and brings peace. Bob Kelleman does this from the first page to the end of this thoughtful and caring devotional guide."

—Andy Farmer, Pastor of Counseling and Care, Covenant Fellowship Church

"The prophet Isaiah predicted one of the names of the Savior would be Wonderful Counselor. How fitting it is, then, to take a walk through the earthly journey of Jesus, listening to His gracious, redirecting words of hope and comfort! Anyone journeying through their own grief will find this warm devotional helpful and encouraging."
